

Seeds

If you 'judge not' you will never need to forgive.

Seek that which can neither be given nor taken away.

There is food for the body, harvested from the land. There is food for the imagination, harvested from the Arts. There is food for the mind, harvested from Academia. There is food for the soul, harvested from the Spirit. The first is labour, the second is leisure, the third is study and the last is worship.

Most people spend years learning the language of the world, yet believe they can learn the language of the spirit in minutes. Living simply does not mean living frugally. Silence is not the absence of sound; rather it is the absence of self.

To everything in nature there is a cycle given. In the year there is spring, summer, autumn and winter. For humanity there is infancy, youth, maturity and old-age. For each nation there is the birth and development of its identity, the expansion of territory for its expression, the growth of its arts and sciences and eventually decadence. This is natural and exactly as it should be. Recognising this cyclic process operating even within oneself, the spiritual aspirant perceives at the beginning of the work there must be contemplation and study of the teaching. This matures as it is ground into one's life. Eventually that which is sown bears fruit in the realisation and personal expression of truth, culminating in ones entering into the silence.

Prayer is the language used by the soul communing with the divine. Prayers offered for the well-being of others are always heard.

The more we come to know of the 'indwelling Self' the more we are filled with reverence.

Apply your Will to the perfecting of your being, nothing else is more personally worthwhile or important to humanity.

Life's imperative is the full and complete expression of spiritual potential.

The Wise seek to know the Good within themselves and are thereby capable of knowing the Good in all things.

Even as the Mind is illuminated by the light of Wisdom, so too must the heart be warmed by compassion.

You will not find knowledge of the Divine in your stomach.

Memories are the seeds of the future.

Humanity usually approaches God with the intention of receiving something, this is only natural. However, it is also important to recognise the other side of this coin; which lies in the practice of 'giving' to God, not directly, but through giving to those we meet in this life!

The purpose of religion is to lead humanity into the Kingdom of Heaven.

Silence is the beginning of the work.

Examine that which is in your heart that you may know how it is you defile the temple of the Lord.

When we say that we have Freewill what do we really mean? Are we saying that nothing conditions or influences our volition? or are we trying to say no-one controls our lives?

The Well of Wisdom is a source of nourishment; it is wise to know whose well it is.

By the control of the breath we learn to overcome the tyranny of the genes.

Nothing elevates the soul more effectively than Prayer.

Life has no meaning outside of the Divine context.

Light continually descends even into the Lives of those blinded by ignorance.

By suffering the soul is purified.

Enter into the silence and be still, watch and wait diligently, be not led by the phantoms therein but contemplate the word of God.

Divination is not as many believe fortune telling.

The practice of divination is as accurate as the degree of intuition.

The development of intuition is more important than the practice of divination.

Compared to the reality of the Spirit all sensory experience is but a dream.

Ask yourself this question; After working for many years to acquire the fine things of this world, what will you take with you when your time comes, and what will you leave behind?

Every time you feel the urge to speak concerning Truth, stop and listen

What then is the madness of fiends and monsters, but the rule of the instinctive nature.

The living seed germinates and leaves behind the husk which many worship mistaking the husk for the inner reality.

The forces of nature are in harmony and function in accordance with the Will of God.

The Christ I worship is the risen Christ.